Working at Sunshine Canyon Landfill

Chloe Cost now serves as a Sustainability Advisory for Republic Services. Before that, she worked with us at the Sunshine Canyon Landfill as an Environmental Technician.

What was a typical day like?

A regular day for me consisted of collecting data and doing odor inspections. My colleagues and I drove around the community and the landfill to collect information on any odor complaints or hot spots. In the morning, we headed into nearby neighborhoods, where we spent at least four hours each day inspecting the air. If we confirmed any odor problems, we alerted on-site staff, who then work to find solutions to reduce odors.

How did you get into this position?

I have a background in environmental science, which gave me the foundation I needed to join Republic Services as an Environmental Technician. I joined the team after graduating from college and served in this role for more than a year.
